Joan Lichterman Yup. This isn't new. But I think it was the first time a racist got her comeuppance. Usually airlines cater to the complainant. Like a female passenger being asked to move because an ultra-Orthodox Jew didn't want to sit next to a woman. I would have told him not to fly if he didn't like it. Or to buy the whole damned row of seats so he could sit alone. We shouldn't cater to creeps. End of rant.

'Clay County, #Kentucky, is a profoundly depressed area in the heart of coal country. Whether its residents responded to #Trump's dog whistles or rolled the dice on a successful businessman to shake up a status quo that had failed them, the results suggest that they saw real hope in his election: Trump won the county 79-21.

But according to NPR, a lot of folks in Clay County are now starting to worry about their health care, and with good reason. Kentucky set up an #Obamacare exchange and expanded Medicaid under then-governor Steve Beshear, a Democrat, and today around one in three of the state's residents are covered under the program.'

"What I say to them is that people are complicated," Obama told me. "Societies and cultures are really complicated ... This is not mathematics; this is biology and chemistry. These are living organisms, and it's messy. And your job as a citizen and as a decent human being is to constantly affirm and lift up and fight for treating people with kindness and respect and understanding. And you should anticipate that at any given moment there's going to be flare-ups of bigotry that you may have to confront, or may be inside you and you have to vanquish. And it doesn't stop ... You don't get into a fetal position about it. You don't start worrying about apocalypse. You say, O.K., where are the places where I can push to keep it moving forward."

'Under Friday's announcement, the federal government will now hold a 60-day public comment period. It will end before Trump takes office on Jan. 20, which will make undoing Obama's action complicated.

Any attempt to revoke Obama's decision would likely require new rounds of public hearings, studies and analysis under federal law — and would be met with lawsuits by environmental groups.'

Ethiopian Minister of Environment Gemedo Dalle: 'Even the recent outcome of the US elections cannot stop those of us dedicated to battling #climate change.

No country has said it will walk away from global action. To the contrary, countries including China, members of the European Union, Japan and Saudi Arabia have all reconfirmed their commitment to implement the #ParisAgreement. Others, such as Australia, Pakistan and Italy, have even joined the agreement in the days since the US elections. French President Francois Hollande and UN Secretary-General Ban Ki-moon have called on President-elect Trump to drop his campaign pledge to cancel the Paris Agreement; Ban called the Paris Agreement "unstoppable."

The rise of the Nazis was not achieved suddenly by a violent overthrow of the government. It was gradual and mostly legal through the democratic process of elections and appointments, a process that started around 1919.

Using the legislature (Reichstag), the Nazis were able to pass a vote that made Germany into a de facto dictatorship in 1933.

Give Steve Bannon a chance. It's not like he's literally Joseph Goebbels.

Why are progressive ballot measures passing in red states?

Well, one reason is that the alt-right folk are populists. They were hidden before, but now they are out in the open. So they don't feel compelled to vote "fiscally conservative" anymore as that would be "establishment." They will support things like infrastructure projects, a higher min. wage or paid sick leave. Weird.

For those of you who doubt the power of the Internet, alt-right is not an organization. It has no physical headquarters. It doesn't even have a website. It's a loose grouping of meme-makers that frequents Breitbart News, 4chan, 8chan and Twitter.

Repealing #Obamacare without something in its place could cause economic disaster. Remember before the #GreatRecession, the healthcare system was one of our most pressing economic problems.

It was the leading cause of bankruptcy. Even Americans who thought they were fully covered, were left destitute. Skyrocketing costs were hurting businesses. If Obamacare is axed, more than 16 million people could suddenly cancel their health insurance. How will that help the industry and who will end paying for their losses?

'Tuesday California voters approved all three education-related initiatives.
— Prop 55 extends the state income tax on high-income earners to fund K-12 and community colleges.
— Prop 51 will float billions in bonds for school construction and renovation.
— Prop 58 will repeal the English-only requirement of Prop. 227 – a highly controversial measure passed in 1998 requiring English-only instruction for English learners.'

Voters back all three education initiatives on California ballot

State propositions seek to extend tax on wealthy residents, fund a $9 billion construction bond and repeal English-only instruction law.

Dear Americans.

Go ahead, vote for the guy with the loud voice who hates minorities, threatens to imprison his opponents, doesn't give a fuck about democracy, and claims he alone can fix everything. What could possibly go wrong?

Good luck.

This tree is unbelievable!

Via: The Earth Site

This Ancient Tree Has Seen the Bronze Age and is Still Growing

This tree has been alive for 3,200... which means it is enormous. Once you see it in its entirety, your breath will successfully have been taken away..
